

How to Prepare for Your Pitchvillla 100X Forge Interview

Your 100X Forge interview is not a pitch competition.

You don't need a 30-slide presentation, a memorized speech or a perfect answer to every question.

The interview is designed for one thing:

To understand you, your business, where you want to go and whether Pitchvillla can genuinely help you get there.

The conversation may be direct. We may challenge your assumptions, ask uncomfortable questions and go deeper into areas that appear important.

That's intentional.

We want to understand the real business behind the application.

Don't Rehearse. Understand Your Business.

Don't prepare scripted answers.

If you memorize everything you want to say, the conversation can quickly become artificial.

Instead, know your business so well that you can talk about it naturally.

Be prepared to explain:

- What your business does
- Who your customers are
- How you make money
- Why customers choose you
- What makes you different
- What has worked
- What hasn't worked
- Where the business is today
- Where you want to take it

We are not looking for perfect answers. We're looking for clarity.

Be Ready to Explain Your Business Clearly.

One of the first things we may ask is:

"Tell us about your business."

You should be able to answer this in a few simple sentences.

Avoid jargon.

Avoid complicated explanations.

Tell us:

What do you do?

Who do you do it for?

How does the business make money?

Why does it matter?

If you cannot explain your business simply, it may be difficult for us to understand where we can help you.

Know Your Numbers.

If you're already operating a business, know your numbers.

You don't need to memorize every accounting entry.

But you should understand the numbers that define your business.

Be prepared to discuss:

- Revenue
- Monthly revenue
- Growth rate
- Gross margin
- Profitability
- Customer acquisition cost
- Average customer value
- Sales conversion
- Repeat customers
- Cash flow
- Outstanding liabilities
- Team size
- Major operating costs

Depending on your business, we may ask different questions.

For example:

Where does your revenue come from?

Which product or service makes the most money?

What is your most profitable customer segment?

What is your biggest cost?

What has changed in the last 12 months?

What number are you most concerned about?

You don't need to have perfect numbers.

You need to understand your business.

Know Your Customers.

We want to understand whether you actually know the people who buy from you.

Be ready to answer:

Who is your ideal customer?

Why do they buy from you?

Why don't some customers buy?

How do you acquire customers?

What do customers love about your business?

What do they complain about?

Why do customers leave?

What have you learned from your customers that changed the way you operate?

Real customer understanding is more valuable than generic market research.

Know Your Competition.

You should know who you're competing against.

Not just their names.

Understand:

- What they do well
- Where they are weak
- How they acquire customers
- Their pricing
- Their positioning
- Why customers choose them
- Where you are genuinely different

Don't simply say:

"We have better quality."

Explain why.

Don't simply say:

"Our product is more affordable."

Explain how that changes the customer's decision.

Be Honest About What's Not Working.

This is one of the most important parts of the conversation.

Every growing business has problems.

Maybe your:

- Sales aren't predictable
- Team isn't strong enough
- Founder is involved in everything
- Marketing isn't converting
- Margins are too low
- Operations are chaotic
- Technology is outdated
- Business model needs restructuring

- Expansion isn't working
- Cash flow is under pressure

Tell us.

We are not expecting you to have solved every problem before joining 100X Forge.

In fact, understanding your problems clearly helps us understand whether the program can help.

A founder saying:

"This is our biggest problem. We've tried X and Y. Neither worked. We currently believe Z is the reason."

is much more useful than:

"Everything is going great."

Know Why You Need 100X Forge.

We may ask:

"Why Pitchvilla?"

Don't answer with:

"I want mentorship."

Go deeper.

Tell us what you actually need.

Maybe you need:

A stronger business strategy.

A restructuring plan.

A professional leadership team.

A scalable sales engine.

Technology and automation.

Fundraising preparation.

Expansion strategy.

A completely different way of operating the business.

The clearer you are about the problem, the better we can understand the potential fit.

Know Where You Want to Go.

We want to understand your ambition.

Not just:

"I want to grow."

Tell us what growth means to you.

Where do you want the business to be in:

12 months?

3 years?

5 years?

What does the company look like?

How large is the team?

What markets are you operating in?

What revenue are you targeting?

What kind of organization are you trying to build?

Your vision doesn't have to be perfectly predictable.

It needs to be meaningful.

Be Ready to Discuss Your Biggest Decision.

Founders make hundreds of decisions.

We may ask:

What is the biggest decision you need to make right now?

Or:

If you had to change one thing in your business tomorrow, what would it be?

Think about this before the interview.

The answer often reveals how well a founder understands their own business.

Bring Your Business Into the Interview.

If you have something tangible, be ready to show it.

This could include:

- Your product
- Website
- App
- Store
- Dashboard
- Sales process
- Business model
- Customer journey
- Marketing campaigns
- Financial dashboard
- Existing systems

Don't create something just for the interview.

Show us what you actually use to run the business.

Multiple Founders? Come Together.

If you have co-founders, we want to understand the founding team not just one person.

Be prepared for questions around:

Who owns what?

Who makes which decisions?

How did you meet?

What does each founder bring?

How do you handle disagreements?

Every founder doesn't need to speak equally.

But everyone should understand the business and be prepared to participate.

Don't Pretend You Know Everything.

You don't need to have every answer.

If you don't know something, say so.

If you made a mistake, tell us.

If your previous strategy failed, explain what you learned.

If you are unsure about a decision, tell us why.

We care about how you think, not just whether you have the answer.

A thoughtful:

"I don't know yet, but this is how I'm thinking about it."

is better than an answer designed to sound impressive.

Be Yourself.

The people interviewing you may become the people you work with throughout your 100X Forge journey.

So don't try to become the founder you think Pitchvillla wants to see.

Come as yourself.

Be ambitious.

Be honest.

Be curious.

Be direct.

And be willing to have your assumptions challenged.

Before Your Interview

Make sure you can answer these 15 questions clearly:

1. What does your business do?
2. Who is your customer?
3. How does the business make money?
4. What is your current revenue?
5. What has grown or changed recently?
6. What is working particularly well?
7. What is currently broken?
8. What is your biggest business challenge?
9. Who are your biggest competitors?
10. Why do customers choose you?
11. What have you tried that didn't work?
12. Where do you want the business to be in 3 years?
13. What is stopping you from getting there?
14. Why do you want to join 100X Forge?
15. What would you want Pitchvillla to help you accomplish in the next 6 months?

If you can answer these honestly and clearly, you're prepared.

One Last Thing

Don't spend the week before your interview trying to sound like a great founder.

Spend it being one.

Talk to your customers.

Look at your numbers.

Fix something.

Launch something.

Make a decision.

Solve a problem.

Move the business forward.

Because ultimately, the best preparation for a founder interview is progress.

Come ready to talk about what you've built, what you've learned, what's holding you back and what you're ready to build next.
